THE gravest constitutional crisis England has faced in a century has come to a head, as the British public for the first time has become aware of the turmoil caused by King Edward's intention to marry Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson. Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin, it was stated on highest authority, acquainted the king with his intention to resign unless the king abandoned his projected marriage. A pointed reminder to the king by the Bishop of Bradford on his "duties" and "need of God's grace," coupled with immediate reaction in the provincial press, served to set the country by the ears. In the meantime, coronation preparations went ahead as usual. King Edward, Mrs. Simpson, Baldwin and the Bishop of Bradford (in church robes) are shown above.

TOWNSEND AND AIDES INDICTED FOR CONTEMPT

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3 (UP)—Dr. Francis E. Townsend and two lieutenants in the old age pension organization were indicted by the District of Columbia grand jury on charges of contempt of the U. S. house of representatives.

Charges resulted from their refusal to testify before a house investigating committee.

Indictments, returned many months ago after the doctor stalked out of committee hearings, named Townsend, Dr. Clinton Wunder and John B. Keifer. The latter refused to answer committee subpoenas after Townsend instructed them to ignore the investigation.

They were directors of New York and Chicago regions, respectively.

The charge, filed by Miller Fissell, deputy sheriff, resulted from an auto accident on Route 56 Saturday night in which Mabel Bailey, 19, of South Perry, sustained a broken right forearm.

Leist Instructed to File Application With WPA

Two additional steps toward the construction of a sewage disposal plant were taken by councilmen Wednesday night. They selected Floyd G. Browne, of Marion, as consulting engineer, and instructed Carl C. Leist, city solicitor, to file a preliminary application with the state PWA organization for government aid.

Councilman T. M. Barnes, chairman of council's committee recommended Mr. Browne after members held a lengthy closed session discussing employment of an engineer. An adjourned session will be held next Wednesday night for the consideration of a contract between council and Mr. Browne. In recent weeks councilmen had conferred with numerous engineers for the project.

Mr. Browne said he had worked on plants for Shelby, Bellefontaine, Columbus Grove, Mechanicsburg, and the reconstruction of the Urbana plant.

The engineer will assist city officials in conducting surveys, selecting the type of plant best suited for Circleville, the proper site, and ironing out the numerous other details connected with construction of a modern, efficient plant.

Removal of Sales Tax on Food to Cut Deeply In State's Revenue

More Cash Needed to Pay Old Age Pensions

COLUMBUS, Dec. 3.—(UP)—Unless new sources of revenue can be found, the 1937 budget will show a deficit of $19,088,919, state tax authorities predicted today.

Most seriously affected, according to a report made public today by Carlton S. Dargusch, vice chairman of the State Tax Commission, are the schools with an anticipated deficit of $15,990,000 due to the removal of the sales tax on food to be taken of the premises.

Total schools needs in 1937 were estimated at $56,000,000—practically the same as in 1936. If present tax allocations are maintained, only a little more than $40,000,000 will be available.

Under the foundation program, 60 per cent of the sales tax collection were earmarked for school needs. But even if this percentage were increased, as it has been suggested, the education department still would show a deficit, and local subdivisions, which now receive about $14,000,000 in sales tax revenues, would be seriously crippled, officials pointed out.

FICKARDT STORE, FOUNDED IN 1839, QUILTS BUSINESS

Fickardt's drug store, W. Main street, operated under that name since 1839, is being closed out by George H. Fickardt, proprietor, for the opening of an auto sales and service in the building about Jan. 1.

Mr. Fickardt announced Wednesday he had leased the first floor of the building to H. O. "Jack" Pile, local auto dealer. A shop will be constructed in the rear of the room.

In 1839, George H. Fickardt, grandfather of the present owner, purchased the drug store. This building was located on the old market square. The next owner of the store was Fred L. Fickardt, father of the present owner, who died in 1931.

Mr. Fickardt purchased the store from his father in 1919.

Disruption of communications made it impossible to obtain an accurate picture of the havoc wrought by the storm. The weather bureau had difficulty in charting its course.

UIBLE AND DAVIS NOMINATED FOR ASSEMBLY JOBS

COLUMBUS, Dec. 3.—(UP)—Leaders of the 1937-38 Ohio house of representatives will be two of the youngest men who have held the offices of speaker and speaker pro tem in that body.

They are Rep. Frank R. Uible, 42, Cleveland, and Rep. Jacob E. Davis, 31, Waverly, who were nominated for these offices at the organization caucus of the Democratic majority members-elect of the new house.

Inasmuch as the Democrats have 105 members in the new house of representatives, and the Republicans only 33, nomination by the majority caucus is equivalent to election. Action of the caucus will be formally ratified by election when the new general assembly convenes next Jan. 4.

Uible, speaker-designate, and Davis, caucus selection for speaker pro tem and majority floor leader, are attorneys.

Uible defeated Rep. Al Kalb of Ottawa county, in the speakership contest, 72 to 32, after a bitter oratorical battle in the caucus, featured by charges that the Cleveland was the candidate of "utilities, special interests and privileged groups."

"The question to decide is whether you want the special interest to roll your bills down the sewer," he said. "Al Kalb would be a progressive speaker and he won't pussy-foot."

BALDWIN'S DEMAND FINDS KING DEFIANT

Nation's Leaders Visit Prime Minister at No. 10 Downing Street After Wednesday Night Visit Fails to End Mrs. Simpson's Friendship

DUKE OF YORK LEAVES SCOTLAND

Six Policemen Sent to Guard Wally, Who Remains Under Doctor's Care from Flu

LONDON, Dec. 3.—(UP)—King Edward and his cabinet, split on his friendship with Mrs. Wallis Simpson, stood their ground unyielding today while Great Britain's millions anxiously awaited the solution of a crisis now risen to historic proportions.

King Edward summoned to his country home, Fort Belvedere, three of his closest advisers and oldest friends—Maj. Ulick Alexander, keeper of his privy purse; Col. Piers Legh, his equerry, and Sir Godfrey Thomas, his assistant private secretary.

Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin summoned to No. 10 Downing street, the old house in which the country's grave problems have been threshed out for two centuries, leader after leader in British public life.

Chamberlain Called
A small, whispering crowd saw Lord Halifax, the lord privy seal in the cabinet, and fiercest opponent of the idea of the King marrying Mrs. Simpson, enter the old house. Neville Chamberlain, chancellor of the exchequer, and his wife, left their official home next door for a brief walk in St. James's park adjoining.

The Duke of York, eldest of the king's three brothers and his heir presumptive, hurried back to London from Scotland with his duchess.

Both went at once to Marlborough house to console Queen Mary, reported almost broken-hearted over the crisis in her beloved oldest son's life.

The duke cancelled an engagement to open new extensions of Wardsworth Technical Institute this afternoon.

Reports spread in unofficial circles that the king had decided to abdicate in favor of the duke rather than give in. The cabinet's decision not to meet this morning and a conference by the king with the keeper of his privy purse—who watches his money for him—were cited as substantiation. It was said that the king was arranging his finances and might go abroad.

Police Clear Street
Mounted police were called to clear Downing street as an excited crowd grew in numbers at lunch time.

Six uniformed policemen were rushed to No. 16 Cumberland terrace to guard Mrs. Wallis Simpson, who spent the night there and was reported to be confined to her room, under her physician's orders, suffering from an attack of flu—and, like the king himself, waiting to see what this was going to mean in her life.

The policemen ordered newspaper men and photographers from the vicinity of Mrs. Simpson's home.

Reports persisted that she intended to go abroad for several months.

The situation was one of increasing seriousness with no solution in sight.

Decision Set for 7 P. M.
Zero hour for the most important decision in the king's life, whether he would persist in his desire to marry Mrs. Simpson, was 7 p. m., tomorrow, it was understood.

Prime Minister Baldwin was understood to have given him until then — 48 hours from their angry talk of last night — to decide.

An unidentified official, reported to be a high official of the dominions office, brought Baldwin replies from the governments of Australia, New Zealand, Canada (Continued on Page Four)

EDWARD ADDRESSES HIS YOUNG NIECE AS 'QUEEN'

LONDON, Dec. 3.—(UP)—It was recalled today that King Edward always has addressed his niece, Princess Elizabeth, as "Queen."

"Hullo, Queen Elizabeth," the Princess becomes heir to the throne after her father, the Duke of York.

The funeral will be Saturday at 2 p. m. at the home with burial in Forest cemetery, Circleville.

Mr. Bowman is survived by his widow, Lela M.; two sons, William F., at home, and Edward M. Bowman, Detroit; two daughters, Mrs. Mable C. Trigg and Mrs. Helen M. Thompson, both at home; two brothers and three sisters, Mrs. E. H. Rausenberger, Circleville, is a sister-in-law.

Mr. Bowman was a member of the Masons, Knights of Pythias, Eagles, and Modern Woodmen, all of Circleville, and the Methodist Episcopal church.

He was born July 2, 1872 near Stoutsville.

BRITISH POUND SLIDES

PARIS, Dec. 3.—(UP)—The British pound fell while the American dollar rose on the bourse today because of the crisis over King Edward's friendship with Mrs. Wallis Simpson. Opening at 21.42 francs the dollar rose to 21.44 francs. The pound opened at 105.15 francs and fell to 105.09.

Since his reindeer are resting for the strenuous Christmas work Santa used a sleigh and pony team provided by local residents.

A sleigh, owned by Paul Johnson, was trimmed in red and silver by Hildeburn Martin and placed on rollers. Two tan and white ponies were loaned St. Nick by Earl Palm, son of Mr. and Mrs. Russell Palm, and George Steeley, son of Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Steeley, both of Route 4, Earl Beavers, Route 4, brought the ponies to town on his truck.

Many Characters Help
Another feature of the parade was a group of story-book characters, including clowns, dogs, the Three Bears, Jack and Jill, a lion, and others. Members of Scout Troop, No. 158, aided in providing the characters.

A truck from Wallace's bakery hauled the candy to the courthouse for Santa Claus to make his distribution. Ladies of the Lutheran Von Bora and Ladies' Aid societies had assisted in packing the candy in special Christmas boxes.

Santa had sufficient boxes of candy for every child who attended his party at the courthouse. After every child had been presented a box very few remained in the truck.

Santa's trip to Circleville and his candy distribution was made possible through the cooperation of Circleville's merchants and business men. His visit opens the holiday program.

Other features include the decoration of the main corner, a home and store decoration contest, a public drawing for merchandise prizes and a community Christmas tree.

UIBLE AND DAVIS NOMINATED FOR ASSEMBLY JOBS

COLUMBUS, Dec. 3.—(UP)—Leaders of the 1937-38 Ohio house of representatives will be two of the youngest men who have held the offices of speaker and speaker pro tem in that body.

They are Rep. Frank R. Uible, 42, Cleveland, and Rep. Jacob E. Davis, 31, Waverly, who were nominated for these offices at the organization caucus of the Democratic majority members-elect of the new house.

Inasmuch as the Democrats have 105 members in the new house of representatives, and the Republicans only 33, nomination by the majority caucus is equivalent to election. Action of the caucus will be formally ratified by election when the new general assembly convenes next Jan. 4.

Uible, speaker-designate, and Davis, caucus selection for speaker pro tem and majority floor leader, are attorneys.

Uible defeated Rep. Al Kalb of Ottawa county, in the speakership contest, 72 to 32, after a bitter oratorical battle in the caucus, featured by charges that the Clevelandlander was the candidate of "utilities, special interests and privileged groups."

"The question to decide is whether you want the special interest to roll your bills down the sewer," he said. "Al Kalb would be a progressive speaker and he won't pussy-foot."

LEGION PASSES ITS 1936 QUOTA OF 122 MEMBERS

Members of the Howard Hall post, American Legion, will hold a pig roast in Memorial Hall after their meeting Dec. 16. Howard Anderson was named chairman in charge of the roast.

The post has passed its quota of 122 in the membership drive, but complete reports are not available. The quota includes new, old and re-instated members. The team headed by William Betts, Jr. obtained the most memberships.

Four members of the local post plan to attend the commanders' and adjutants' conference to be held in Columbus next Sunday. They are Ralph Schumm, commander; James Shea, adjutant; James Cook, chaplain, and William Betts, district vice commander.

RED CROSS ROLL CALL TO REACH ITS $900 GOAL

The Red Cross drive in Circleville and Pickaway county will go over the goal of $900.

Ray W. Davis, drive chairman, said numerous reports are still to be received and at present the fund has passed the $600-mark. A complete report will be announced as soon as all reports are available.

Nation's Leaders Visit Prime Minister at No. 10 Downing Street After Wednesday Night Visit

Fails to End Mrs. Simpson's Friendship

DUKE OF YORK LEAVES SCOTLAND

Six Policemen Sent to Guard Wally, Who Remains Under Doctor's Care from Flu

LONDON, Dec. 3.—(UP)—King Edward and his cabinet, split on his friendship with Mrs. Wallis Simpson, stood their ground unyielding today while Great Britain's millions anxiously awaited the solution of a crisis now risen to historic proportions.

King Edward summoned to his country home, Fort Belvedere, three of his closest advisers and oldest friends—Maj. Ulick Alexander, keeper of his privy purse; Col. Piers Legh, his equerry, and Sir Godfrey Thomas, his assistant private secretary.

Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin summoned to No. 10 Downing street, the old house in which the country's grave problems have been threshed out for two centuries, leader after leader in British public life.

Chamberlain Called

A small, whispering crowd saw Lord Halifax, the lord privy seal in the cabinet, and firmest opponent of the idea of the king marrying Mrs. Simpson, enter the old house. Neville Chamberlain, chancellor of the exchequer, and his wife, left their official home next door for a brief walk in St. James's park adjoining.

The Duke of York, eldest of the king's three brothers and his heir presumptive, hurried back to London from Scotland with his duchess.

Both went at once to Marlborough house to console Queen Mary, reported almost broken-hearted over the crisis in her beloved oldest son's life.

The duke cancelled an engagement to open new extensions of Wardsworth Technical Institute this afternoon.

Reports spread in unofficial circles that the king had decided to abdicate in favor of the duke rather than give in. The cabinet's decision not to meet this morning and a conference by the king with the keeper of his privy purse—who watches his money for him—were cited as substantiation. It was said that the king was arranging his finances and might go abroad.

Police Clear Street
Mounted police were called to clear Downing street as an excited crowd grew in numbers at lunch time.

Six uniformed policemen were rushed to No. 16 Cumberland terrace to guard Mrs. Wallis Simpson, who spent the night there and was reported to be confined to her room, under her physician's orders, suffering from an attack of flu—and, like the king himself, waiting to see what this was going to mean in her life.

The policemen ordered newspaper men and photographers from the vicinity of Mrs. Simpson's home.

Reports persisted that she intended to go abroad for several months.

The situation was one of increasing seriousness with no solution in sight.

Decision Set for 7 P. M.
Zero hour for the most important decision in the king's life, whether he would persist in his desire to marry Mrs. Simpson, was 7 p. m., tomorrow, it was understood.

Prime Minister Baldwin was understood to have given him until then—48 hours from their angry talk of last night—to decide.

An unidentified official, reported to be a high official of the dominions office, brought Baldwin replies from the governments of Australia, New Zealand, Canada (Continued on Page Four)

EDWARD ADDRESSES HIS YOUNG NIECE AS 'QUEEN'

LONDON, Dec. 3.—(UP)—It was recalled today that King Edward always has addressed his niece, Princess Elizabeth, as "Queen."

"Hullo, Queen Elizabeth."

If the king abdicates, the Princess becomes heir to the throne after her father, the Duke of York.

EDSON BOWMAN, FORMER CLERK OF COURT, DIES

Edson C. Bowman, 64, Pickaway county clerk of court from 1913 to 1917, died Wednesday at his home, 26 E. Patterson avenue, Columbus, after several weeks' illness of complications.

Mr. Bowman removed to Columbus from Circleville about eight years ago.

The funeral will be Saturday at 2 p. m. at the home with burial in Forest cemetery, Circleville.

Mr. Bowman is survived by his widow, Lela M.; two sons, William F., at home, and Edward M. Bowman, Detroit; two daughters, Mrs. Mable C. Trigg and Mrs. Helen M. Thompson, both at home; two brothers and three sisters, Mrs. E. H. Rausenberger, Circleville, is a sister-in-law.

Mr. Bowman was a member of the Masons, Knights of Pythias, Eagles, and Modern Woodmen, all of Circleville, and the Methodist Episcopal church.

He was born July 2, 1872 near Stoutsville.

BRITISH POUND SLIDES

PARIS, Dec. 3.—(UP)—The British pound fell while the American dollar rose on the bourse today because of the crisis over King Edward's friendship with Mrs. Wallis Simpson. Opening at 21.42 francs the dollar rose to 21.44 francs. The pound opened at 105.15 francs and fell to 105.09.

COUNCIL HEARS GORDON APPEAL FOR SHOE FUND

Officials May Act Next Week After Result of Mayor's Plea is Learned

75 CHILDREN HANDICAPPED

Schools' Revenue is Reduced as Attendance Falls

An appeal to council for aid in providing shoes for needy school children was made Wednesday night by Ben Gordon.

Mr. Gordon explained school officials had conferred with him about relief and wondered if council could offer aid. Approximately 75 pupils were absent from city schools Wednesday because their shoes were not suitable for wearing in snow. The absence of pupils causes a cut in the school revenue under the foundation program, based on the average daily attendance, Mr. Gordon said.

Carl Leist, city solicitor, informed council he believed shoes could be furnished under the outdoor relief division, but the important question was whether or not funds were available.

Mayor W. J. Graham told council he had sent out a general appeal for residents, lodges and various city organizations to aid in the program and he hoped for immediate response.

Councilmen decided to wait and see what aid was received from these organizations and consider the appeal at a meeting next Wednesday.

TITO SCHIPA SINGS WITH GIBBONS SATURDAY NIGHT

Tito Schipa famous operatic tenor, will be Floyd Gibbons' guest on the Spedshow next Saturday night.

Schipa has just finished an engagement with the Chicago Opera company during which he starred in six different operatic productions. For several years he sang with the Metropolitan Opera in New York. A second guest star for the broadcast over the Columbia network at 9 p. m. (EST) will be announced later.

The Spedshow also includes stories of the war in Spain by Gibbons, and music by Vincent Lopez' orchestra, with piano specialty numbers by the deft-fingered band leader.

Women's fraternities have a higher scholastic rating than men's fraternities, according to the annual announcement of B. U. sororities' and fraternities' figures by Dean Everett W. Lord of the college of business administration.

ITURBI DIRECTS ORCHESTRA FOR 8:30 PROGRAM

Bing Crosby, Vallee, Ross and Others Booked for Thursday

Thursday evening's radio highlight, in addition to Bing Crosby and a few more of the boys, will be the appearance of Jose Iturbi as director of the Rochester Philharmonic orchestra. Mr. Iturbi, famous Spanish pianist, will appear at 8:30 over NBC.

Some of the evening's most entertaining programs will include Boake Carter, 7:45, CBS; Rudy Vallee, 8, WLW; Kate Smith, 8, CBS; Guy Lombardo, 8:30, MBS; Lanny Ross, 9, NBC; Major Bowes' amateurs, 9, CBS; Little Jack Little, 10, WGN; Clem McCarthy, 11, NBC.

ROBERT MONTGOMERY

Robert Montgomery, that suave and romantic clown of the screen, does quite a little clowning and even more romancing in "The Grand Duchess and the Waiter" when he stars in this play in the Radio Theatre next Monday night, December 7.

"The Grand Duchess and the Waiter," an amusing story of sea-saw social stations, will be the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer star's third play in the Radio Theatre. When the broadcast emanated from New York, Montgomery played the male leads in "Candle Light" and "Man in Possession."

Montgomery played on Broadway for several years and entered pictures in 1929 with M-G-M. His first roles were in college pictures, including "So This is College" and "College Days."

Among outstanding pictures he has made since then are "Private Lives," "When Ladies Meet," "Another Language," "Forsaking All Others," and "Petitcoat Fever."

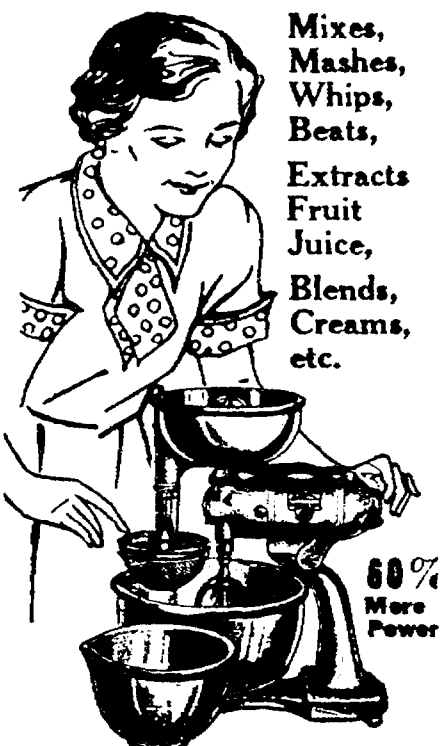

In the broadcast over the Columbia network at 9 p. m. (EST), Montgomery plays the role of Albert Hess, scion of a wealthy Swiss family, who has fallen in love with the Grand Duchess Xenia, and even becomes a waiter in her hotel in order to meet her.

He is a bungling, impertinent waiter, but the Grand Duchess is fascinated. He learns that she is "broke" and secretly places some money in her purse. She finds out who he is and then spends her

RECORDS ARE SHATTERED

Corn, Oats, Rye Score Top
Bids For Long While

Seven days of advancing prices with renewed waves of speculative purchase orders has sent wheat to new record top quotations on the Chicago market. The Circleville market has been accompanying the steady climb in Chicago.

Other grains, corn, oats and rye, passed previous peaks.

Anxiety over the European political crisis, especially as to chance that open hostilities outside of Spain might develop, focused in large degree the attention of traders. Dealings showed a feverish character at times, but price reactions became the rule as the day drew to an end, with big selling in progress to realize profits.

Heavily increased estimates of proposed import purchases of for Italy were current, one prediction pointing to a probable total of 56,000,000 bushels.

Great strength shown in the Liverpool market, together with reports of enlarged domestic flour business and with sustained demand for cash wheat shipments out of Chicago, formed a background for buying of wheat futures here.

On the other hand, Chicago July wheat showed a lagging tendency throughout because of plentiful overnight timely moisture for crops in the domestic winter wheat area Southwest, and some moisture also in spring crop districts Northwest.

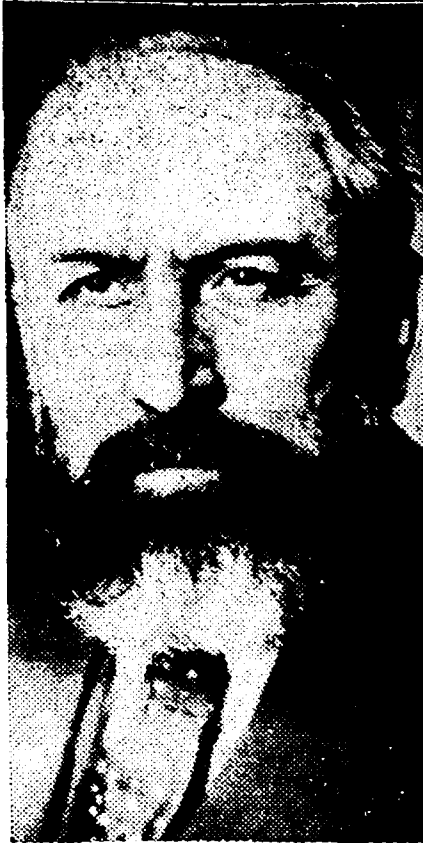

Bulls made much of the fact that Liverpool wheat closed decidedly higher than due, 2 3/4 @ 3 cents up overnight. Increased wheat buying for British millers was noted, although yesterday they were asserted to be adamant against following wheat price upturns. Meanwhile, estimates were that 1,000,000 bushels of Canadian wheat was bought today for export, and importing countries were described as being aggressive purchasers of Southern Hemisphere wheat.

Corn, oats, and rye, after soaring new peak prices, receded under liberal profit taking and as a result of the fact that buying of these cereals was not on a scale relatively as broad as in wheat. Rural offerings of corn to arrive were of larger volume than of late.

HAPPY RELIEF FROM PAINFUL BACKACHE

Caused by Tired Kidneys

Many of those gnawing, nagging, painful backaches people blame on colds or strains are often caused by tired kidneys—and may be relieved when treated in the right way. The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. Most people pass about 3 pints a day or about 3 pounds of waste. If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, lumbago, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from the blood. ## HAPPY RELIEF FROM PAINFUL BACKACHE

Caused by Tired Kidneys

Many of those gnawing, nagging, painful backaches people blame on colds or strains are often caused by tired kidneys—and may be relieved when treated in the right way. The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. Most people pass about 3 pints a day or about 3 pounds of waste.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, lumbago, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from the blood. Get Doan's Pills.

and South Africa to an appeal Baldwin was reported to have sent them for support of cabinet against king on the constitutional crisis.

So serious was the situation, and so far away seemed a solution, that Baldwin was understood to have cancelled his plan to mention the crisis in the house of commons this afternoon in reply to an arranged question by Maj. Clement Attlee, labor party leader.

It was said authoritatively at noon that unless there was an unexpected development Baldwin would make no statement before tomorrow at the earliest.

Simon Called Too

Just after this statement was made, Baldwin called in Sir John Simon, home secretary, and with Halifax, the leading supporter of Baldwin in bitter opposition to any idea of marriage between the king and Mrs. Simpson.

There were reports that members of the royal family — from whom he has been almost estranged for weeks because of his refusal to give up Mrs. Simpson — visited the king at Fort Belvedere this morning.

That they did not was borne out, aside from statements of spokesmen by his departure from the fort at 12:30 p. m. for London, in his Humber Snipe motor car, with two members of his staff.

Before he left he read all the London newspapers, discussing for the first time his friendship with Mrs. Simpson — and warning him bluntly to abandon it — and summoned from Buckingham palace a motorcycle dispatch rider with the latest state papers.

It was learned from an absolutely trustworthy quarter that developments up to this afternoon were:

1. The king had not budged from his position that his relationship with Mrs. Simpson is his own private business. Baldwin's talk with him last night did not succeed in opening the way for a solution.
2. Baldwin informed the king that in the opinion of the cabinet the supreme importance of the monarchy with regard to national and imperial interests far transcended personal consent to be a national figure and give up his hope of being only a man.
3. Baldwin told Edward of expressions of opinion which had reached the cabinet from the empire, particularly from Canada.
4. Baldwin guardedly intimated to Edward that unless he saw fit to follow the cabinet's advice to refrain from marrying Mrs. Simpson the most critical situation might arise because the cabinet might be impelled to resign. Baldwin said further that consultations with opposition leaders indicated they would not accept an invitation to form a government if Baldwin resigned, in other words that the parliament was united against him.
5. Baldwin urged the king to consider all the implications of a situation whose gravity was all the more serious because of a tense international situation.

Tax authorities also pointed out that the deficit might reach the staggering figure of $34,088,919 if relief costs touched the 1936 total of $27,000,000. The present estimate provides only $6,000,000 for relief in 1937.

If Gov. Martin L. Davey stands by his declaration of no new taxes in 1937, officials said, there will be little possibility of a balanced budget, despite the governor's belief that increased prosperity will boost present revenues sufficiently to put the financial ship on an even keel.

Another serious problem facing state government next year is the financing of old age pensions. Of the $17,255,700 needed for this purpose, only $13,000,000 is in sight at present.

have a $6,100,000 deficit which must be paid off.

Tax authorities also pointed out that the deficit might reach the staggering figure of $34,088,919 if relief costs touched the 1936 total of $27,000,000. The present estimate provides only $6,000,000 for relief in 1937.

If Gov. Martin L. Davey stands by his declaration of no new taxes in 1937, officials said, there will be little possibility of a balanced budget, despite the governor's belief that increased prosperity will boost present revenues sufficiently to put the financial ship on an even keel.

Another serious problem facing state government next year is the financing of old age pensions. Of the $17,255,700 needed for this purpose, only $13,000,000 is in sight at present.

Prohibition Now Effective in More Than Two-Thirds

WESTERVILLE DRY CAPITAL

984 Townships Out of 1,337
Bar Sale of Liquor

COLUMBUS, Dec. 3.—(UP)—Looking forward to the campaign of 1940, it is conceivable that Ohio may be the political battleground for an important fight between wets and drys.

Ohio actually is more than two-thirds dry now. That is to say more than two-thirds of the state's political subdivision prohibit the sale of hard liquor.

In the 1936 election, 105 subdivisions, including townships and small municipalities, voted to prohibit the sale of intoxicating liquor and 87 voted to outlaw the sale of beer.

984 Townships Dry
Of the 1,337 townships in Ohio, 984 now forbid the sale of hard liquor and 204 prohibit beer.

Ohio many times in the past has been called the cradle of prohibition, and Westerville is the nation's dry capital.

Westerville, a peaceful village a few miles from Columbus, is the home of Dr. Howard Hyde Russell, founder of the Anti-Saloon League and one of the most militant of a long line of warriors for the dry cause.

Ohio voted wet by a heavy majority in 1933 when the question of repeal of the 18th Amendment was submitted. The state's vote was 1,444,033 for repeal; 584,238 against. Most of the wet vote was piled up in metropolitan areas.

Prohibition Gains Claimed
In each year since repeal, however, Ohio dry leaders have claimed increasing sentiment in favor of return to prohibition.

Oddly, the dry fight has been carried on quietly. There has been little of the old time crusading and bar-wrecking that characterized the war on liquor in another day. The attitude of the drys is that liquor will defeat itself, with little assistance from the anti-alcoholic ranks.

"People are getting sick and tired of the way liquor places are being run," said S. P. McNaught, superintendent of the Ohio Anti-Saloon League. "The state liquor department is pouring water on our wheel all the time because they refuse to do anything about it."

"After this we'll win every election that we try."

The committee headed by Councilman C. O. Leist, studying signals for the Norfolk & Western crossings, was granted further time Wednesday night for making a report.

The committee, consisting of all members of council, plans to meet with railroad officials in the near future. An assistant engineer of the railroad informed councilmen recently the company is willing to install new electric wigwag signals at its crossings in lieu of maintaining gates at Washington, Mound, Main and High streets.

Councilmen in a committee meeting favored the new signals at Washington, Scioto, Ohio, Mound and High streets but preferred gates at W. Main street and want watchmen on duty 24 hours daily.

CALVARY CHURCH
NOW CONDUCTING REVIVAL SERVICE

The Rev. S. S. Davis of Calvary Evangelical church is conducting revival meetings at his church.

Prayer service is held each day, except Monday, from 9 to 10 a. m. The Rev. Mr. Davis, today, issued the following statement concerning his services:

On Sunday morning at the close of the service 16 persons bowed at the altar of Calvary Evangelical church seeking forgiveness of sin and spiritual victory, in the old-fashioned way.

"We believe God is leading and that now is the time of Salvation and a revival.

"I have not as yet found any substitute for experimental religion, and though we may discuss the question of its necessity pro and con, I think we will have to admit that praying through to victory through the blood of Jesus Christ is the only plan that really works and makes new creatures.

"It seems that the revival has begun and we are trying to follow the leading God's spirit on with the meetings. The services will continue. It seems advisable to close.

CALVARY CHURCH NOW CONDUCTING REVIVAL SERVICE

The Rev. S. S. Davis of Calvary Evangelical church is conducting revival meetings at his church.

Prayer service is held each day, except Monday, from 9 to 10 a. m. The Rev. Mr. Davis, today, issued the following statement concerning his services:

On Sunday morning at the close of the service 16 persons bowed at the altar of Calvary Evangelical church seeking forgiveness of sin and spiritual victory, in the old-fashioned way.

"We believe God is leading and that now is the time of Salvation and a revival.

"I have not as yet found any substitute for experimental religion, and though we may discuss the question of its necessity pro and con, I think we will have to admit that praying through to victory through the blood of Jesus Christ is the only plan that really works and makes new creatures.

"It seems that the revival has begun and we are trying to follow the leading God's spirit in going on with the meeting." The services will continue until it seems advisable to close.

ARMY STANDARDS

The Eastern judge who recently suspended sentence on a young man convicted of stealing, with the understanding that he enlist in the United States Army, was deficient in his conception of the proprieties and also his knowledge of Army and Navy standards. Some years ago this was a more or less common expediency of magistrates who acted on the principle that their full duty was performed once they rid their community of a wayward young man who might be expected to give trouble in the future.

This policy has always aroused the resentment of Army and Navy officers against magistrates who considered the armed services as dumping grounds for criminals, and this feeling has been expressed in vigorous and angry terms, as was the case in this most recent instance, when the ignorant judge was sent a stinging and justified rebuke for his foolish and unwarranted assumption that the Army and Navy offer places of refuge for disreputable characters.

In fact, it is not an easy matter for young men to gain admission to these services at the present time. They must provide indisputable proof of high character, furnished by former employers, clergymen and others familiar with their records. Furthermore, the educational qualifications are exacting, as also are the physical requirements. The military service is, in fact, a highly technical profession and only young men of unusual caliber are able to hold their own in the Army and Navy as now constituted. The ambitious youth will find there innumerable opportunities for the expression of his talents and will emerge from a period of service far better qualified for the responsibilities of civil life.

FREE COLLEGE EDUCATION

DR. ROBERT MAYNARD HUTCHINS, of the University of Chicago, is one of the distinguished educators of America, also a young man of vision and enthusiasm. Yet, his assurance, expressed at a recent convention of teachers in Atlantic City, that boys and girls will find it possible in the not distant future to obtain college educations up to and including the sophomore year in his or her home town at public expense, seems at best a remote possibility.

Before anything of this sort can happen, American education must first recover the losses suffered during devastating years of the depression. These losses are not at the present time recognized in their true light by citizens generally, though they are known well to the more thoughtful and discerning of educators.

It is rather futile to talk of college educations for youth at public expense when teachers are still pitifully underpaid and

ALIENS FACE DEPORTATION

WASHINGTON—Three thousand aliens, most of them heads of American families and guilty of no crimes except illegal entry, are headed for deportation—unless the incoming Congress intervenes.

The government does not want to deport them, has stalled doing so for several years by stretching a provision in the immigration law that gives it limited authority to delay action. Last session the House passed the Kerr-Coolidge bill, which would have given the Immigration Bureau discretionary power to spare these unfortunate and their innocent families from the tragedy and ruin of separation, while strengthening its hands to deal with criminal and seditious aliens.

But a last-minute filibuster in the Senate, led by North Carolina's bombastic Bob Reynolds, log-jammed the measure and prevented its enactment.

This blow left Immigration authorities with no alternative but to set deportation machinery in motion.

Reluctantly, orders were issued to prepare the exodus of the tragic 3,000 and in the last few weeks Immigration agents have been holding hearings, executing deportation papers and arranging transportation and other details.

This work will require about three months to complete, thus giving the new Congress ample time to intervene, if it desires.

Backers of the Kerr-Coolidge bill plan to renew the fight for it. The measure will be re-introduced the opening day of Congress and a vigorous drive made to rush it through the committee for prompt floor consideration. What its fate will be there, only time will tell.

"HARDSHIP CASES"

The tragic 3,000 are officially listed in Immigration files as "hardship cases." They are that in every sense of the word.

None are undesirable, all are self-supporting and law abiding, virtually all have families, business connections and other ties. Their deportation would deprive 5,000 American-born wives and children of their bread-winners and fathers, throw hundreds of them on relief rolls.

The only offense of the 3,000 is that sometime in the past, in some instances over a decade ago, they entered the country illegally.

In many of the cases even this offense is largely technical.

What makes the dilemma of this group particularly tragic is the fact that while they face deportation hundreds of other aliens, guilty of crimes and treasonable activities, and a heavy burden on the country, can not be shipped out because they entered within the law.

Classes are being conducted in ancient buildings falling into decay.

In many ways primary and secondary education throughout the United States has suffered devastating effects from the depression. Years will pass before normal standards have been reestablished. Not until then will it be possible even to consider the establishment of a free system of higher education.

'ROUND CIRCLEVILLE . . Hour by Hour

PAGES from the Diary of an Antiquated Reporter:

Certainly, there is a Santa Claus. Didn't he visit this village yesterday afternoon? Who could doubt him after seeing the scores of trailing pop-eyed children and the absolute faith reflected in faces of the younger ones? There may have been doubt in the minds of some of the boys, but they were running no risks in presence of the patron saint of the holidays. An interesting parade that drew a large crowd despite entire lack of cooperation on part of the weatherman.

What beautiful Christmas card scene in all directions at day-break! A sight really worth getting up to see. Slippery pavements along postoffice way, but there and back without mishap, although did skid frequently and saw others in like predicament. Sloppy going on the sidewalks, but shovels soon were in action and ways quickly cleared. Wonder why the city can not arrange for a winter street cleaning project following heavy snows? Someone out of work may pick up a few extra dimes by snow shoveling out the scrivener's way, but so far in more than a year no one, except a boy too small for the job, has ever applied for the work.

An afternoon spent inspecting Christmas merchandise in the village's fine stores and much surprised by both quantity and quality. A tip to the wise: Look over local stocks before going to Columbus to buy. You will save both time and money. And that is no idle statement, either.

Genial Fred Clark looks well in red. Here comes Ben Gordon, the businessman-alderman, and there goes Eddie Rothman, of department store fame. Eowed in fine friendliness to Senator Chapple, Wallace Crist and to Ed Ebert, who has sold his business establishment and is casting about for another enterprise.

Smiled with Druggist Suver who was in high spirits after applying makeup to the faces of a score of youngsters who were to participate in the parade. Nothing knocks dull care into a recumbent position quicker than association with youth. Boys and girls, of course, have their troubles, but in the spring of life they are soon shoved into the background by new and urgent interests. It is only the old and foolish who take trouble too seriously. Worry never has accomplished anything, except to increase sale of tummy tablets.

Everywhere the spirit of Christmas except in Europe where guns thunder and diplomats pour their contributions into the slumgullion simmering in the caldron of war. Peace and good will should be the attitude of Americans not only at Christmas time, but all the year around.

Here and there a budding Christmas tree, and moving into the background the bright colors and tinsel of the yule season. Yes, it is time to be happy and to help make others happy. Wish I could find a little boy and a little girl who would be forgotten by Santa unless I intervened in their behalf. A mighty pleasant and comforting feeling would be knowledge of such a fact on Christmas morning.

Tuberculosis Curable, Victims Now Assured

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.
WE KNOW now, as our ancestors did not know, that tuberculosis can be cured. The gloomy outlook that our ancestors took on the subject was that they thought of the disease in terms of what we call the "late" cases.

Dr. Clendingen

Even in the late cases, sometimes get well, but the early case can be assured of recovery in a very high percentage of instances. The difficulty with the situation is that it is a very insidious disease and may become established before the individual has any sensation of illness. There is no pain attached to it, and pain is the thing that usually brings patients to the doctor. I have often said that the patient who has a hemorrhage is the lucky patient because, when this occurs in an early case, the dramatic onset may be so frightening that the patient will immediately seek counsel. We are bringing more and more of these early cases to the doctor, and the fact that we are has been the result of public instruction and the spread of knowledge of the nature of the disease.

Affects the Young

It is a disease which particularly affects young people from the age of 15 to 45, and especially from 20 to 30. It is pathetic to think that one out of six deaths among young men, and one out of four deaths among young women in the very height of what should be their happiest and most productive years, is due to this cause.

The symptoms show up at this period of life, but most cases probably date back to early childhood. Childhood tuberculosis is an entirely different sort of disease from adult tuberculosis, and many be confined to lymph nodes in the chest years before it invades the lung tissue itself. For that reason many schools, under the direction of the National Tuberculosis Society, are advocating an annual tuberculin test among the scholars.

This test is given to students who desire it. It is simple, scientific, and has no ill effects. It has proved to be exceedingly valuable in many cases. The skin tuberculin test is valuable in childhood, and selects out many cases which by proper care can be healed, and thus prevent the development in the early years of adult life.

In the presence of such insidious symptoms as unexplained loss of weight, or persistent underweight, persistent cough, generally under par condition—especially with a cough and expectoration—all young people should submit to a complete examination in order to prove or disprove the existence of tuberculosis.

Complete diagnostic examination should include a careful history, examination of the bare chest with the stethoscope, X-ray picture of the chest and a bacteriological examination of the sputum, and a record of the temperature, morning and evening, for a week. With this means, the modern physician is able to spot the early case at least 95 per cent of the time.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Seven pamphlets by Dr. Clendingen can now be obtained by sending 30 cents in coin, for each, and a self-addressed envelope stamped with a three-cent stamp. Dr. Logan Clendingen, in care of this paper. The pamphlets are: "Three Weeks Reducing Diet," "Indigestion and Constipation," "Reducing and Gaining," "Infant Feeding Instructions for the Treatment of Diabetes Hygiene," and "The Care of the Hair and Skin."

The BLOODHOUNDS Bay

By WALTER S. MASTERMAN
 COPYRIGHT: RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

READ THIS FIRST:
 Jack Reid, only witness to the mysterious murder of Sir Henry Severing in the chapel of his ancient abbey, is a ne'er-do-well who has lived by his wits. In the chapel of a jeweled clock, Reid could raise no alarm at the time of the murder for fear of unroofing himself. Before Richard Selden is summoned from Scotland Yard, Reid, who has posed as an itinerant painter working at the abbey, Colonel Graham, a neighbor, and Eric Colindale, agent of the estate, trace Sir Henry's body to his father's coffin with the aid of bloodhounds. Selden and Hutchins, the local officer, interview Colindale and Reid, the butler, and Lady Hilda, who is in love with Colindale.
 (NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)

CHAPTER 13

SELDEN and the inspector were sitting in a private sitting room at the Blue Inn. Hutchins had politely declined to stay the night, saying that he must go to Grinford and report the whole case.

After telephoning, however, he had consented to stay for a meal—as neither man had taken a bite since breakfast. Rumors of the murder had already filtered into the village, and the gates of the drive had been closed and locked. A small crowd of gaping villagers stood gazing up the drive with the strange fascination that a murder exercises over the human mind. Hilda, proprietor of the inn, had managed to produce two enormous steaks, excellently cooked, and a bottle of good burgundy. The two men set to with the appetites of hungry wolves.

The good food and generous wine made Hutchins talkative, and when he set down his knife and fork with a sigh of satisfaction he felt more friendly towards the young detective, whose methods he could not comprehend.

"The information on the phone that Colonel Graham had made things right with the chief constable, and that he was to work on the case with Selden, had a softening effect, and he was disposed towards discussion.

The pleasant sound of water passing over the old weir and the scent of the flowers through the open window from the well-stocked garden made a welcome change from the grim business of the murder. Hutchins smoked contentedly. He longed to ask questions, to try to discover whether this young man was really clever or merely bluffing. But it would never do to display his own ignorance.

"That was smart of you, Selden"—he had reached the stage of calling his colleague by his surname—"about that candlestick, very smart."

Selden laughed. "It was not difficult. I saw a splash of candle grease outside the door of Lady Severing's bedroom on the polished skirting before we ever went into her private sitting room."

"What do you make of it?"
 "It's a very interesting case. There are so many facts that it would be unwise to speculate at this moment. For example, that butler is a queer character—please don't think I am accusing him," he added hastily, "because no one—at present, I merely state that he is very unusual in type for a butler."

"In what particular way?"
 "He has a private suite of rooms, and is a great reader. He had been practically master of the house for years, and there is more—"
 "Please go on. It is most interesting," Hutchins said, as Selden stopped.

 "Well, there are several rather curious things about James. Handwriting is one of the subjects to which great attention is given at the school, and has become an exact science. I got Colindale to give me a specimen of Sir Henry's writing—one can judge character in that way, and you remember I asked him to fill in the details of the sketch of the house for me. He wrote the names of the various rooms, and I induced James to do the same."

"I wondered why," Hutchins said, all attention now.
 "He was taken off his guard. He wrote the names of the servants' quarters for me, and the writing was identical with Sir Henry's."

"What is the meaning of that?"
 "I am going to take the matter up carefully, but at first sight I should say that the butler had been in the habit of writing for Sir Henry—perhaps for years. That doesn't make him a murderer, but it requires a little explanation."

A discreet tap came at the door, and Hilda entered in shirt-sleeves. The excitement at the Abbey had greatly increased his sales, and he knew that thirsty pressmen would be invading the village in swarms as soon as the news was known in London. That was all to the good, but the presence of two detectives in the place was a source of anxiety, as some of his more secret activities would have to be suspended, with the "cops" in residence.

"A lady to see you, sir." He addressed Hutchins, whom he knew well.

"Who is it?" Hutchins asked, not best pleased at being disturbed.

"Mrs. Thornton, the housekeeper from the Abbey."

"Admit her," Hutchins said grandly.

The woman came in, wheezing from fast walking, and obviously nervous. Selden rose and offered her a seat, with a smile of welcome.

"Thank you, sir." She sat down heavily, and Selden took a rapid glance, summing her up mentally with quick discernment. The tight lips and acid face, eyes too close set, and determined little jaw, a narrow-minded, suspicious type, a busybody for choice, and a dangerous woman.

"I would have come before if it had been possible," she began, squaring her shoulders as though for a fight. "First we were all locked up in the house like convicts, and then Lady Severing forbade me to go out. There have been things going on in that house far too long in my opinion. What with that Mr. Colindale—"

She stopped for want of breath, and Selden quickly intervened.

"Yes, Mrs. Thornton? he said gently. "You want to tell us something of what occurred at the Abbey last night, and perhaps Lady Severing didn't want you to come here, is that it?"

"Yes, I do," she said viciously, "though her ladyship—there was a world of sense in her voice—told me that it was no business of mine to tell tales. It's the duty of everyone to tell the truth. Mr. Selden."

"Quite so. We are both waiting to hear what you have to say. Tell it in your own way."

"Thank you, I will." The jaw set and the thin, cruel lips made a straight line. "I've been there at the Abbey for years, Mr. Selden. It's my belief that they have been trying to kill Sir Henry for a very long time."

"Come, come!" Hutchins said sharply. "You mustn't go making accusations, you know, unless you can prove them."

"For a moment the woman looked put out, but Selden said suavely: "She has not mentioned any names, Inspector, and I am sure that she had no intention of doing so; had you, Mrs. Thornton?"

"No names, no pack drill," Hutchins said decisively. The housekeeper drew herself together primly. "Well, of course, if you gentlemen don't wish to hear anything—only I thought as there had been a cold-blooded murder done it was in the interests of justice that I should tell you all I know."

"Of course, madam; we are only too ready to listen, but just give us information, you understand. Now, about last night?" Selden hurried on, fearing that she would interrupt. "Could you tell us anything that occurred then?"

The face of the woman became animated with a sort of secretive energy.

"Yes, I can," she stated emphatically. "I am only a light sleeper. Mr. Selden, and I found it difficult to rest as I had been reading an exciting detective story, 'The Blue Murder,' you probably know it."

"Quite," Selden answered untruthfully.

"It would be about two o'clock, I should say, and the moon was shining full on the opposite side of the court. My eye was caught by a light that shone at each window in turn in the corridor on the ground floor. I thought it strange that anyone should be moving at that time of night, but I am far from being superstitious. I am a corresponding member of the Society of the Flame—a spiritualistic assembly of ardent souls."

"I have heard of it, but this light—was it a candle or a lamp—could you tell?"
 "There are no lamps that I have ever seen in the house," Mrs. Thornton said with a note of alarm, creeping into her voice. "Dear me, I never thought of that—and none of us use candles—I really couldn't say what it was."

"You did not see anyone carrying the light by any chance?" Selden asked patiently.

"No, I didn't. I just saw the flash as the windows were passed, going towards the chapel."

The woman had apparently been so scared that she had been afraid to look too closely.

"That would have been—"

Hutchins began, but a look from Selden stopped him.

"Did you see the light coming back later?" he asked hurriedly.

"No; and that is the curious part, Mr. Selden. No light came back, but another went by."

"Ah, a second light—that's very interesting. Do you mind if we smoke, Mrs. Thornton?"

"I have no objection. In fact, I do so myself when I am in my own room."

Selden offered a cigaret, and took one himself, while Hutchins lit a pipe.

ARMY STANDARDS

THE Eastern judge who recently suspended sentence on a young man convicted of stealing, with the understanding that he enlist in the United States Army, was deficient in his conception of the proprieties and also his knowledge of Army and Navy standards. Some years ago this was a more or less common expediency of magistrates who acted on the principle that their full duty was performed once they rid their community of a wayward young man who might be expected to give trouble in the future.

This policy has always aroused the resentment of Army and Navy officers against magistrates who considered the armed services as dumping grounds for criminals, and this feeling has been expressed in vigorous and angry terms, as was the case in this most recent instance, when the ignorant judge was sent a stinging and justified rebuke for his foolish and unwarranted assumption that the Army and Navy offer places of refuge for disreputable characters.

In fact, it is not an easy matter for young men to gain admission to these services at the present time. They must provide indisputable proof of high character, furnished by former employers, clergymen and others familiar with their records. Furthermore, the educational qualifications are exacting, as also are the physical requirements. The military service is, in fact, a highly technical profession and only young men of unusual caliber are able to hold their own in the Army and Navy as now constituted. The ambitious youth will find there innumerable opportunities for the expression of his talents and will emerge from a period of service far better qualified for the responsibilities of civil life.

FREE COLLEGE EDUCATION

DR. ROBERT MAYNARD HUTCHINS, of the University of Chicago, is one of the distinguished educators of America, also a young man of vision and enthusiasm. Yet, his assurance, expressed at a recent convention of teachers in Atlantic City, that boys and girls will find it possible in the not distant future to obtain college educations up to and including the sophomore year in his or her home town at public expense, seems at best a remote possibility.

Before anything of this sort can happen, American education must first recover the losses suffered during devastating years of the depression. These losses are not at the present time recognized in their true light by citizens generally, though they are known well to the more thoughtful and discerning of educators.

It is rather futile to talk of college educations for youth at public expense when teachers are still pitifully underpaid and

ALIENS FACE DEPORTATION

WASHINGTON—Three thousand aliens, most of them heads of American families and guilty of no crimes except illegal entry, are headed for deportation—unless the incoming Congress intervenes.

The government does not want to deport them, has stalled doing so for several years by stretching a provision in the immigration law that gives it limited authority to delay action. Last session the House passed the Kerr-Coolidge bill, which would have given the Immigration Bureau discretionary power to spare these unfortunates and their innocent families from the tragedy and ruin of separation, while strengthening its hands to deal with criminal and seditious aliens.

But a last-minute filibuster in the Senate, led by North Carolina's bombastic Bob Reynolds, log-jammed the measure and prevented its enactment.

This blow left Immigration authorities with no alternative but to set deportation machinery in motion.

Reluctantly, orders were issued to prepare the exodus of the tragic 3,000 and in the last few weeks Immigration agents have been holding hearings, executing deportation papers and arranging transportation and other details.

This work will require about three months to complete, thus giving the new Congress ample time to intervene, if it desires.

Backers of the Kerr-Coolidge bill plan to renew the fight for it. The measure will be re-introduced the opening day of Congress and a vigorous drive made to rush it through the committee for prompt floor consideration. What its fate will be there, only time will tell.

"HARDSHIP CASES"

The tragic 3,000 are officially listed in Immigration files as "hardship cases." They are that in every sense of the word.

None are undesirables, all are self-supporting and law abiding, virtually all have families, business connections and other ties. Their deportation would deprive 5,000 American-born wives and children of their bread-winners and fathers, throw hundreds of them on relief rolls.

The only offense of the 3,000 is that sometime in the past, in some instances over a decade ago, they entered the country illegally.

In many of the cases even this offense is largely technical.

What makes the dilemma of this group particularly tragic is the fact that while they face deportation hundreds of other aliens, guilty of crimes and treasonable activities, and a heavy burden on the country, can not be shipped out because they entered within the law.

Classes are being conducted in ancient buildings falling into decay.

In many ways primary and secondary education throughout the United States has suffered devastating effects from the depression. Years will pass before normal standards have been reestablished. Not until then will it be possible even to consider the establishment of a free system of higher education.

'ROUND CINCINNATI . . . Hour by Hour

PAGES from the Diary of an Antiquated Reporter:

Certainly, there is a Santa Claus. Didn't he visit this village yesterday afternoon? Who could doubt him after seeing the scores of trailing pop-eyed children and the absolute faith reflected in faces of the younger ones? There may have been doubt in the minds of some of the boys, but they were running no risks in presence of the patron saint of the holidays. An interesting parade that drew a large crowd despite entire lack of cooperation on part of the weatherman.

What beautiful Christmas card scene in all directions at day-break! A sight really worth getting up to see. Slippery pavements along postoffice way, but there and back without mishap, although did skid frequently and saw others in like predicament. Sloppy going on the sidewalks, but shovels soon were in action and ways quickly cleared. Wonder why the city can not arrange for a winter street cleaning project following heavy snows? Someone out of work?

may pick up a few extra dimes by snow shoveling out the scrivener's way, but so far in more than a year no one, except a boy too small for the job, has ever applied for the work.

An afternoon spent inspecting Christmas merchandise in the village's fine stores and much surprised by both quantity and quality. A tip to the wise: Look over local stocks before going to Columbus to buy. You will save both time and money. And that is no idle statement, either.

Genial Fred Clark looks well in red. Here comes Ben Gordon, the businessman-alderman, and there goes Eddie Rothman, of department store fame. Eowed in fine friendliness to Senator Chappellear, Wallace Crist and to Ed Ebert, who has sold his business establishment and is casting about for another enterprise.

Smiled with Druggist Suver who was in high spirits after applying makeup to the faces of a score of youngsters who were to participate in the parade. Nothing knocks dull care into a recumbent position quicker than association with youth. Boys and girls, of course, have their troubles, but in the spring of life they are soon shoved into the background by new and urgent interests. It is only the old and foolish who take trouble too seriously. Worry never has accomplished anything, except to increase sale of tummy tablets.

Everywhere the spirit of Christmas except in Europe where guns thunder and diplomats pour their contributions into the slumgullion simmering in the caldron of war. Peace and good will should be the attitude of Americans not only at Christmas time, but all the year around.

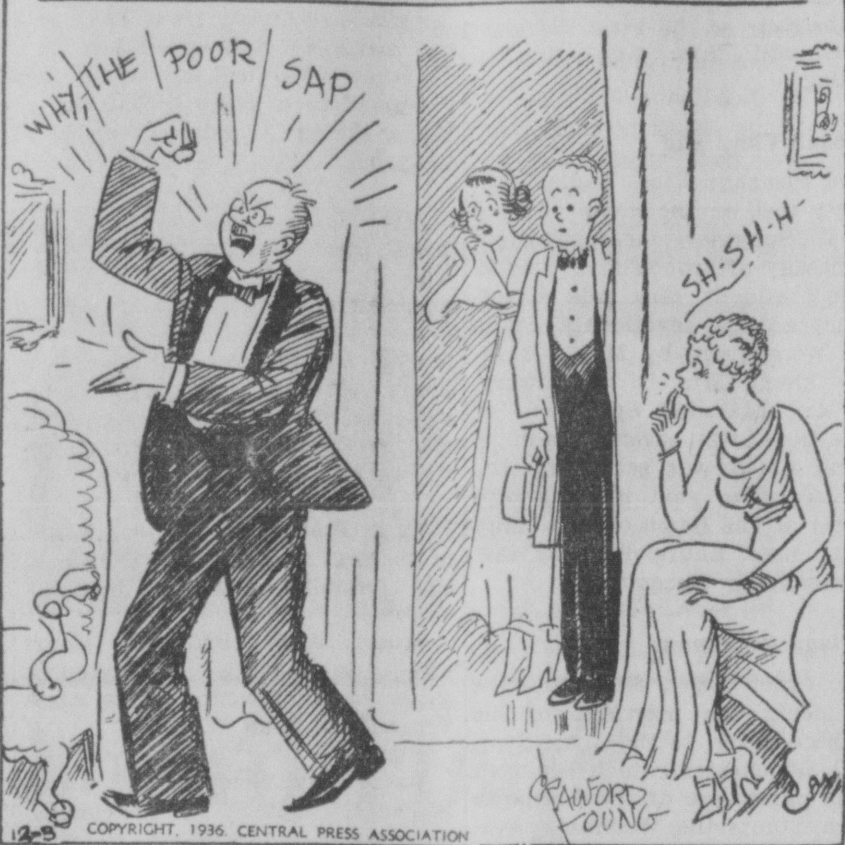

Here and there a budding Christmas tree, and moving into the background the bright colors and tinsel of the yule season. Yes, it is time to be happy and to help make others happy. Wish I could find a little boy and a little girl who would be forgotten by Santa unless I intervened in their behalf. A mighty pleasant and comforting feeling would be knowledge of such a fact on Christmas morning.

Tuberculosis Curable, Victims Now Assured

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

WE KNOW now, as our ancestors did not know, that tuberculosis can be cured. The gloomy outlook that our ancestors took on the subject was that they thought of the disease in terms of what we call the "late" cases. Even these sometimes get well, but the early case can be assured of recovery in a very high percentage of instances.

The difficulty with the situation is that it is a very insidious disease and may become established before the individual has any sensation of illness. There is no pain attached to it, and pain is the thing that usually brings patients to the doctor. I have often said that the patient who has a hemorrhage is the lucky patient because, when this occurs in an early case, the dramatic onset may be so frightening that the patient will immediately seek counsel. We are bringing more and more of these early cases to the doctor, and the fact that we are has been the result of public instruction and the spread of knowledge of the nature of the disease.

Affects the Young

It is a disease which particularly affects young people from the age of 15 to 45, and especially from 20 to 30. It is pathetic to think that one out of six deaths among young men, and one out of four deaths among young women in the very height of what should be their happiest and most productive years, is due to this cause.

The symptoms show up at this period of life, but most cases probably date back to early childhood. Childhood tuberculosis is an entirely different sort of disease from adult tuberculosis, and many be confined to lymph nodes in the chest years before it invades the lung tissue itself. For that reason many schools, under the direction of the National Tuberculosis society, are advocating an annual tuberculin test among the scholars. This test is given to students who desire it. It is simple, scientific, and has no ill effects. It has proved to be exceedingly valuable in many cases. The skin tuberculin test is valuable in childhood, and selects out many cases which by proper care can be healed, and thus prevent the development in the early years of adult life.

In the presence of such insidious symptoms as unexplained loss of weight, or persistent underweight, persistent cough, generally under par condition—especially with cough and expectoration—all young people should submit to a complete examination in order to prove or disprove the existence of tuberculosis.

Complete diagnostic examination should include a careful history, examination of the bare chest with the stethoscope, X-ray picture of the chest and a bacteriological examination of the sputum, and a record of the temperature, morning and evening, for a week. With this means, the modern physician is able to spot the early case at least 95 per cent of the time.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Seven pamphlets by Dr. Clending can now be obtained by sending 10 cents in coin, for each, and a self-addressed envelope stamped with a three-cent stamp, to Dr. Logan Clending, in care of this paper. The pamphlets are: "Three Weeks' Reducing Diet," "Indigestion and Constipation," "Reducing and Gaining," "Infant Feeding," "Instructions for the Treatment of Diabetes," "Feminine Hygiene," and "The Care of the Hair and Skin."

The BLOODHOUNDS BAY

By WALTER S. MASTERMAN
COPYRIGHT: RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

READ THIS FIRST:

Jack Reid, only witness to the mysterious murder of Sir Henry Severing in the chapel of his ancient abbey, is a ne'er-do-well who has lived by his wits. In the chapel to steal a jeweled cross, Reid could raise no alarm at the time of the murder for fear of incriminating himself. Before Richard Selden is summoned from Scotland Yard, Reid, who has posed as an itinerant painter working at the abbey, Colonel Graham, a neighbor, and Eric Colindale, agent of the estate, trace Sir Henry's body to his father's coffin with the aid of bloodhounds. Selden and Hutchins, the local officer, interview Colindale and Reid, James, the butler, and Lady Hilda, who is in love with Colindale.

(NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)

CHAPTER 13

SELDEN and the inspector were sitting in a private sitting room at the Bull Inn. Hutchins had politely declined to stay the night, saying that he must go to Grinford and report the whole case.

After telephoning, however, he had consented to stay for a meal—as neither man had taken a bite since breakfast. Rumors of the murder had already filtered into the village, and the gates of the drive had been closed and locked. A small crowd of gaping villagers stood gazing up the drive with the strange fascination that a murder exercises over the human mind. Hucks, proprietor of the inn, had managed to produce two enormous steaks, excellently cooked, and a bottle of good burgundy. The two men set to with the appetites of hungry wolves.

The good food and generous wine made Hutchins talkative, and when he set down his knife and fork with a sigh of satisfaction he felt more friendly towards the young detective, whose methods he could not comprehend.

The information on the phone that Colonel Graham had made things right with the chief constable, and that he was to work on the case with Selden, had a softening effect, and he was disposed towards discussion.

The pleasant sound of water passing over the old weir and the scent of the flowers through the open window from the well-stocked garden made a welcome change from the grim business of the murder. Hutchins smoked contentedly. He longed to ask questions, to try to discover whether this young man was really clever or merely bluffing. But it would never do to display his own ignorance.

"That was smart of you, Selden," he had reached the stage of calling his colleague by his surname—"about that candlestick, very smart."

Selden laughed. "It was not difficult. I saw a splash of candle grease outside the door of Lady Severing's bedroom on the polished skirting before we ever went into her private sitting room."

"What do you make of it?" "It's a very interesting case. There are so many facts that it would be unwise to speculate at this moment. For example, that butler is a queer character—please don't think I am accusing him," he added hastily. "I accuse no one at present. I merely state that he is very unusual in type for a butler."

"In what particular way?" "He has a private suite of rooms, and is a great reader. He had been practically master of the house for years, and there is more—"

"Please go on. It is most interesting," Hutchins said, as Selden stopped.

"Well, there are several rather curious things about James. Handwriting is one of the subjects to which great attention is given at the school, and has become an exact science. I got Colindale to give me a specimen of Sir Henry's writing—one can judge character in that way, and you remember I asked him to fill in the details of the sketch of the house for me. He wrote the names of the various rooms, and I induced James to do the same."

"I wondered why," Hutchins said, all attention now.

"He was taken off his guard. He wrote the names of the servants' quarters for me, and the writing was identical with Sir Henry's."

"What is the meaning of that?" "I am going to take the matter up carefully, but at first sight I should say that the butler had been in the habit of writing for Sir Henry—perhaps for years. That doesn't make him a murderer, but it requires a little explanation."

A discreet tap came at the door, and Hucks entered in shirt-sleeves. The excitement at the Abbey had greatly increased his sales, and he knew that thirsty pressmen would be invading the village in swarms as soon as the news was known in London. That was all to the good, but the presence of two detectives in the place was a source of anxiety, as some of his more secret activities would have to be suspended, with the "cops" in residence.

"A lady to see you, sir," he addressed Hutchins, whom he knew well.

"Who is it?" Hutchins asked, not best pleased at being disturbed.

"Mrs. Thornton, the housekeeper from the Abbey."

"Admit her," Hutchins said grandly.

The woman came in, wheezing from fast walking, and obviously nervous. Selden rose and offered her a seat, with a smile of welcome.

"Thank you, sir," she sat down heavily, and Selden took a rapid glance, summing her up mentally with quick discernment. The tight lips and acid face, eyes too close set, and determined little jaw, a narrow-minded, suspicious type, a busybody for choice, and a dangerous woman.

"I would have come before if it had been possible," she began, squaring her shoulders as though for a fight. "First we were all locked up in the house like convicts, and then Lady Severing forbade me to go out. There have been things going on in that house far too long in my opinion. What with that Mr. Colindale—"

She stopped for want of breath, and Selden quickly intervened. "Yes, Mrs. Thornton?" he said gently. "You want to tell us something of what occurred at the Abbey last night, and perhaps Lady Severing didn't want you to come here, is that it?"

"Yes, I do," she said viciously, "though her ladyship—there was a world of scorn in her voice—"told me that it was no business of mine to tell tales. It's the duty of everyone to tell the truth. Mr. Selden."

"Quite so. We are both waiting to hear what you have to say. Tell it in your own way."

"Thank you, I will." The jaw set and the thin, cruel lips made a straight line. "I've been there at the Abbey for years, Mr. Selden. It's my belief that they have been trying to kill Sir Henry for a very long time."

"Come, come!" Hutchins said sharply. "You mustn't go making accusations, you know, unless you can prove them."

For a moment the woman looked put out, but Selden said suavely: "She has not mentioned any names, Inspector, and I am sure that she had no intention of doing so; had you, Mrs. Thornton?"

"No names, no pack drill," Hutchins said decisively.

The housekeeper drew herself together primly. "Well, of course, if you gentlemen don't wish to hear anything—only I thought as there had been a cold-blooded murder done it was in the interests of justice that I should tell you all I know."

"Of course, madam; we are only too ready to listen, but just give us information, you understand. Now, about last night!"—Selden hurried on, fearing that she would interrupt. "Could you tell us anything that occurred then?"

The face of the woman became animated with a sort of secretive energy. "Yes, I can," she stated emphatically. "I am only a light sleeper, Mr. Selden, and I found it difficult to rest as I had been reading an exciting detective story, 'The Blue Murder'; you probably know it."

"Quite," Selden answered truthfully.

"It would be about two o'clock, I should say, and the moon was shining full on the opposite side of the court. My eye was caught by a light that showed at each window in turn in the corridor on the ground floor. I thought it strange that anyone should be moving at that time of night, but I am far from being superstitious. I am a corresponding member of the Society of the Flame—a spiritualistic assembly of ardent souls."

"I have heard of it, but this light—was it a candle or a lamp—could you tell?"

"There are no lamps that I have ever seen in the house," Mrs. Thornton said with a note of alarm creeping into her voice. "Dear me, I never thought of that—and none of us use candles—I really couldn't say what it was."

"You did not see anyone carrying the light by any chance?" Selden asked patiently.

"No, I didn't. I just saw the flash as the windows were passed, going towards the chapel."

The woman had apparently been so scared that she had been afraid to look too closely.

"That would have been—" Hutchins began, but a look from Selden stopped him.

"Did you see the light coming back later?" he asked hurriedly.

"No; and that is the curious part, Mr. Selden. No light came back, but another went by."

"Ah, a second light—that's very interesting! Do you mind if we smoke, Mrs. Thornton?"

"I have no objection. In fact, I do so myself when I am in my own room."

Selden offered a cigaret, and took one himself, while Hutchins lit a pipe.

ARRIVAL OF BILL TERRY EXPECTED TO SPEED MAJOR LEAGUE DEALS

GIANT MANAGER HOLDS KEY TO DEAN'S TRADING

Landis to Address Minor Moguls, But Decision on Feller May Be Delayed

HANK LEIBER ON MARKET

Rickey to Remember Deal of Spring With New York

MONTREAL, Que., Dec. 3 — (UP) — The leading roles on the baseball stage were accorded today to silver-haired Kenesaw Mountain Landis, Bill Terry, pilot of the New York Giants, and J. Louis Comiskey, owner of the Chicago White Sox.

Landis arrived from Chicago to address the gathering of minor leaguers at their 35th annual convention, bringing with him the unsolved Bob Feller case. The commissioner holds the answer to baseball's most baffling question: whether Feller, 19-year-old pitching sensation, belongs to the Cleveland Indians, or his signing violated a rule that will make him a free agent.

May Delay Ruling
It is unlikely that Landis will announce his decision until after the major league meeting in New York next week.

Terry, who is 48 hours overdue, holds the key to trading activities in the National league. If and when he shows up, Terry may start the ball rolling on several deals. The Dizzy Dean trade is at a standstill after the Cardinals' refusal of $200,000 cash from the Cincinnati Reds for the garrulous pitching ace.

President Horace Stoneham refuses to discuss Dizzy Dean except in a joking vein. "We'll give a quarter for Dean, that's all," Stoneham said laughingly. But Terry, a shrewd trader who got the best of Branch Rickey last year in the Roy Parmelee-Burgess Whitehead deal, is expected to make Rickey come down to earth if he really wants to trade Dean. The Giants definitely want Dean to regain favor with New York fans as a result of their shellacking at the hands of the Yankees in the world series.

To Succeed Hanson

AMONG those prominently mentioned as possible successors to Football Coach Vic Hanson, who resigned his position at Syracuse, is Earl Martin, above, assistant coach at Princeton and one-time All-American back at Minnesota. Although no official bid for his services has been made, Martin is said to be agreeable to a proposal submitted to him.

Three Want Leiber
Three clubs are seeking Outfielder Hank Leiber. Cincinnati seems to have the inside track for the big Giant patrolman, with Brooklyn and the Cubs also in the bidding.

BURT SHOTTON NAMED TO HEAD RED BIRD CLUB

MONTREAL, Que., Dec. 3 — (UP) — Donald E. Beach, president of the Columbus club of the American Association, today announced the re-appointment of the veteran Burt Shotton as manager. Shotton was at the helm of the club last year and although it finished in sixth place, the St. Louis Cardinals, who control the Columbus team, were reported to have been satisfied with his direction.

Thompson and Keller to Provide Defensive Test

Coach Jack Landrum of the high school is not yet certain what his starting lineup will look like when Jackson township is met on the Fox Postoffice court Saturday evening. Only one veteran, Don Henry, is back in uniform.

In a lengthy scrimmage against a group of ex-high stars, Wednesday evening, Landrum used many different combinations with Stringbean Smith at center most of the time, and Henry, Francis, Dick Mader, Davis, Jackson, Fickard, Weldon, and Walters getting a lot of action at the other positions.

Jackson township has been traveling fast in the last few weeks with Thompson and Keller, forward and center, doing most of the school's scoring.

DOBIE GAINING AFTER INJURIES IN AUTO CRASH

BOSTON, Dec. 3 — (UP) — Gilmore (Gloomy) Dobie, 37, believed to have coached more winning teams in his 34-year career than any other mentor in college football history, appeared today to be winning a game fight for life.

A slight improvement was reported at city hospital in the condition of both Dobie, since last February head coach at Boston College and his assistant, Frank R. Murdock, 25, of Natrona Heights, Pa., both critically injured early yesterday when their automobile crashed into a railroad overpass.

Their condition was reported "fair," but doctors believed they would recover. They spent a "fairly comfortable" night.

About This And That In Many Sports

Ohio Rated Thirteen

No football team in the country rates as high as does Ohio State after losing three games in a single season — According to the Central Press tabulation, completed by Walter Johns, gridiron expert, Ohio is listed No. 13 in the national lineup — Colgate, with three defeats, is No. 29 — Despite its losses, Ohio is classed ahead of Notre Dame, in No. 15 spot, while Dartmouth with only one loss is No. 14 — Other major teams behind the Buckeyes are Fordham, Duquesne, Auburn, Michigan State, Tennessee, Mississippi State, Villanova, Holy Cross, Southern California, Indiana, Purdue and many others — None of these teams has lost more than twice all year. * * *

Good Games Booked

There will be lots of good basketball in the county this weekend — The Tigers travel to Jackson township Saturday evening to open their schedule — The warmest contest is expected to pit Ashville against Scioto township on the Commercial Point court Friday evening — A record crowd is expected there. * * *

Ohio to Play Rutgers

Ohio U. is going after a good schedule next fall — Rutgers will be played at Brunswick, N. J., with Illinois on the sked, too — The Rutgers trip will be the longest for the Bobcat squad since 1921 when Columbia was met in New York. * * *

Buckeyes Honored

Four Ohio State athletes are on Dr. Jock Sutherland's "all-opponent" team — In case you forget Sutherland directs the Pittsburgh destinies — Ohioans drawn are Wendt, Hamrick, Inwood Smith, and Dye — The remainder of the "all-foes" 11 includes Paquin, Fordham, end; Franco, Fordham, and Doyle, Nebraska, tackles; Pierce, Fordham, guard; Wojciechowski, Fordham, center; Brumbaugh, Duquesne, and Cardwell, Nebraska, halfbacks, and Francis, Nebraska, fullback — What, no Notre Dame man? * * *

THREE SCHOOLS CONSIDERED FOR ROSE BOWL BID

PASADENA, Cal., Dec. 3 — (UP) — Announcement of the University of Washington's opponent in the Rose Bowl New Year's day was expected today from Ray Eckmann, Washington director of athletics. Either Pittsburgh, Louisiana State or Alabama will get the bid, it was believed.

Coach Jimmy Phelan will arrive today and it was believed the announcement would be made after he and Eckmann get together.

DARBY-TWP SCHOOL NEWS

The school's doors were closed last week due to Scarlet Fever which broke out in the Lewis Gantz family.

The closing of the school caused the postponement of the Darby vs. Ashville game which was to be played Tuesday November 23. The game will be played at a future date. Friday December 4 Darby will be honored by the presence of Washington township on the home court. Both Darby teams hope to emerge victorious.

The closing of school caused also the absence of Darby from Ashville for Chorus practice Tuesday November 23, but they hope to be sure to be on hand December 7 which will conclude the practicing for the county chorus.

Mrs. Kathryn Arbrogast is trying to introduce into the school a new and different game, Hockey. The material is to be purchased from the Sterling Polo Equipment Co., Mt. Sterling, Ohio. The equipment is to be paid for by the athletes, by serving lunch and from the sale of candy.

The bid for the building of the school house was awarded to the Williams Construction Company of Washington Court House, at a base contract price of $38,987. The work has been begun and the contractor hopes for immediate construction.

ARRIVAL OF BILL TERRY EXPECTED TO SPEED MAJOR LEAGUE DEALS

GIANT MANAGER HOLDS KEY TO DEAN'S TRADING

Landis to Address Minor Moguls, But Decision on Feller May Be Delayed

HANK LEIBER ON MARKET

Rickey to Remember Deal of Spring With New York

MONTREAL, Que., Dec. 3 — (UP) — The leading roles on the baseball stage were accorded today to silver-haired Kenesaw Mountain Landis, Bill Terry, pilot of the New York Giants, and J. Louis Comiskey, owner of the Chicago White Sox.

Landis arrived from Chicago to address the gathering of minor leaguers at their 35th annual convention, bringing with him the unsolved Bob Feller case. The commissioner holds the answer to baseball's most baffling question: whether Feller, 19-year-old pitching sensation, belongs to the Cleveland Indians, or his signing violated a rule that will make him a free agent.

May Delay Ruling It is unlikely that Landis will announce his decision until after the major league meeting in New York next week.

Terry, who is 48 hours overdue, holds the key to trading activities in the National league. If and when he shows up, Terry may start the ball rolling on several deals. The Dizzy Dean trade is at a standstill after the Cardinals' refusal of $200,000 cash from the Cincinnati Reds for the garrulous pitching ace.

President Horace Stoneham refuses to discuss Dizzy Dean except in a joking vein. "We'll give a quarter for Dean, that's all," Stoneham said laughingly. But Terry, a shrewd trader who got the best of Branch Rickey last year in the Roy Parmelee-Burgess Whitehead deal, is expected to make Rickey come down to earth if he really wants to trade Dean. The Giants definitely want Dean to regain favor with New York fans as a result of their shellacking at the hands of the Yankees in the world series.

AMONG those prominently mentioned as possible successors to Football Coach Vic Hanson, who resigned his position at Syracuse, is Earl Martin, above, assistant coach at Princeton and one-time All-American back at Minnesota. Although no official bid for his services has been made, Martin is said to be agreeable to a proposal submitted to him.

Three Want Leiber Three clubs are seeking Outfielder Hank Leiber. Cincinnati seems to have the inside track for the big Giant patrolman, with Brooklyn and the Cubs also in the bidding.

BURT SHOTTON NAMED TO HEAD RED BIRD CLUB

MONTREAL, Que., Dec. 3 — (UP) — Donald E. Beach, president of the Columbus club of the American Association, today announced the re-appointment of the veteran Burt Shotton as manager. Shotton was at the helm of the club last year and although it finished in sixth place, the St. Louis Cardinals, who control the Columbus team, were reported to have been satisfied with his direction.

SMITH PLAYING CENTER

Thompson and Keller to Provide Defensive Test

Coach Jack Landrum of the high school is not yet certain what his starting lineup will look like when Jackson township is met on the Fox Postoffice court Saturday evening. Only one veteran, Don Henry, is back in uniform.

In a lengthy scrimmage against a group of ex-high stars, Wednesday evening, Landrum used many different combinations with Stringbean Smith at center most of the time, and Henry, Francis, Dick Mader, Davis, Jackson, Pickard, Weldon, and Walters getting a lot of action at the other positions.

Jackson township has been traveling fast in the last few weeks with Thompson and Keller, forward and center, doing most of the school's scoring.

DOBIE GAINING AFTER INJURIES IN AUTO CRASH

BOSTON, Dec. 3 — (UP) — Gilmour (Gloomy Gil) Dobie, 57, believed to have coached more winning teams in his 34-year career than any other mentor in college football history, appeared today to be winning a game fight for life.

A slight improvement was reported at city hospital in the condition of both Dobie, since last February head coach at Boston College and his assistant, Frank R. Murdock, 25, of Natrona Heights, Pa., both critically injured yesterday when their automobile crashed into a railroad overpass upright.

Their condition was reported "fair," but doctors believed they would recover. They spent a "fairly comfortable" night.

About This And That In Many Sports

Ohio Rated Thirteen

No football team in the country rates as high as does Ohio State after losing three games in a single season — According to the Central Press tabulation, completed by Walter Johns, gridiron expert, Ohio is listed No. 13 in the national lineup — Colgate, with three defeats, is No. 29 — Despite its losses, Ohio is classed ahead of Notre Dame, in No. 15 spot, while Dartmouth with only one loss is No. 14 — Other major teams behind the Buckeyes are Fordham, Duquesne, Auburn, Michigan State, Tennessee, Mississippi State, Villanova, Holy Cross, Southern California, Indiana, Purdue and many others — None of these teams has lost more than twice all year. * * *

Good Games Booked

There will be lots of good basketball in the county this weekend — The Tigers travel to Jackson township Saturday evening to open their schedule — The warmest contest is expected to pit Ashville against Scioto township on the Commercial court Friday evening — A record crowd is expected there. * * *

Ohio to Play Rutgers

Ohio U. is going after a good schedule next fall — Rutgers will be played at Brunswick, N. J., with Illinois on the sked, too — The Rutgers trip will be the longest for the Bobcat squad since 1921 when Columbia was met in New York. * * *

Buckeyes Honored

Four Ohio State athletes are on Dr. Jock Sutherland's "all-opponent" team — In case you forget Sutherland directs the Pittsburgh destinies — Ohioans drawn are Wendt, Hamrick, Inwood Smith, and Dye — The remainder of the "all-foes" 11 includes Paquin, Fordham, end; Franco, Fordham, and Doyle, Nebraska, tackle; Pierce, Fordham, guard; Wojciechowski, Fordham, center; Brumbaugh, Duquesne, and Cardwell, Nebraska, halfbacks, and Francis, Nebraska, fullback — What, no Notre Dame man? * * *

THREE SCHOOLS CONSIDERED FOR ROSE BOWL BID

PASADENA, Cal., Dec. 3 — (UP) — Announcement of the University of Washington's opponent in the Rose Bowl New Year's day was expected today from Ray Eckmann, Washington director of athletics. Either Pittsburgh, Louisiana State or Alabama will get the bid, it was believed.

Coach Jimmy Phelan will arrive today and it was believed the announcement would be made after he and Eckmann get together.

DARBY-TWP SCHOOL NEWS

The school's doors were closed last week due to Scarlet Fever which broke out in the Lewis Gantz family.

The closing of the school caused the postponement of the Darby vs. Ashville game which was to be played Tuesday November 23. The game will be played at a future date. Friday December 4 Darby will be honored by the presence of Washington township on the home court. Both Darby teams hope to emerge victorious.

The closing of school caused also the absence of Darby from Ashville for Chorus practice Tuesday November 23, but they hope to be sure to be on hand December 7 which will conclude the practicing for the county Chorus.

Mrs. Kathryn Arbogast is trying to introduce into the school a new and different game, Hockey. The material is to be purchased from the Sterling Polo Equipment Co., Mt. Sterling, Ohio. The equipment is to be paid for by the athletes, by serving lunch and from the sale of candy.

The bid for the building of the school house was awarded to the Williams Construction Company of Washington Court House, at a base contract price of $38,987. The work has been begun and the contractor hopes for immediate construction.

SCOTT'S SCRAPBOOK

by R. J. SCOTT

CONTRACT BRIDGE

FALSE CARDING

FALSE CARDING consists of playing cards out of normal order. If the 10 is led through your Q-J-X, you false-card if you play the Q, instead of playing the lower of the two honors in sequence. If well conceived and not overworked, false carding often confuses an opponent, sometimes enabling the false carder to win an added trick. Having no partner to deceive, the declarer may more safely use deceptive tactics than the defenders.

Beware of allowing false carding to become an obsession, thereby losing its possible value. Suppose that you are the declarer, and know that one of the defenders always false cards the K, from K-Q. You lead the 9 up to the A-J-10-K in dummy, and let the 9 run, only to lose to the Q, held by the habitual false carder. As surely as if you saw his hand, you know that he lacks the K, or he would have played it instead of the Q. Knowing that you can pinch the K, by leading often enough through the false carder's partner, is valuable information, perhaps saving you from having to take another finesse in a different suit. Habitual false carders are a constant source of revenue to observant opponents. Sometimes playing cards straight, and sometimes false carding, always puzzles opponents.

Useless false carding by declarer is stupid. It is surprising to note the number of highly rated players who habitually false card as declarer, when it can do no good.

That also is expensive. No trumps seldom are bid with singleton Aces. If the declarer wins the first trick at no trumps with his Ace, you may be reasonably certain that he also holds the K in reserve. Whereas winning the first trick with the K raises the question of whether he dare not win with a poorly guarded K. A no trump lead of a Q may be either from Q-J-10, or from A-Q-J. It cannot be from K-Q-J. If declarer wins the first trick with the Ace, both defenders know that declarer also holds the K. The leader cannot hold it, and his partner should overplay the Q with the K, in nearly all cases.

The J may be led against no trump from three holdings: A-J-10, K-J-10 or J-10-9. If the leader's partner has an honor he should play it, unless required to later on capture a high card in dummy, that the leader cannot take, if the honor is used to cover. If declarer wins with the Ace, he informs both defenders that he still holds both K and Q, but if he wins with the Q, leader's partner cannot tell what declarer still holds. If a second lead from the left is won by declarer's K or Ace, the leader's partner cannot then tell whether declarer has or has not the missing high honor.

False carding with low cards often is confusing to fine players, who follow closely the fall of the cards, but it produces no impression on careless players. They never know what small cards are missing.

FALSE CARDING

FALSE CARDING consists of playing cards out of normal order. If the 10 is led through your Q-J-X, you false-card if you play the Q, instead of playing the lower of the two honors in sequence. If well conceived and not overworked, false carding often confuses an opponent, sometimes enabling the false carder to win an added trick. Having no partner to deceive, the declarer may more safely use deceptive tactics than the defenders.

Beware of allowing false carding to become an obsession, thereby losing its possible value. Suppose that you are the defenders and know that one of the defenders always false cards the K, from K-Q. You lead the 9 up to the A-J-10-X in dummy, and let the 9 run, only to lose to the Q, held by the habitual false carder. As surely as if you saw his hand, you know that he lacks the K, or he would have played it instead of the Q. Knowing that you can pinch the K, by leading often enough through the false carder's partner, is valuable information, perhaps saving you from having to take another finesse in a different suit. Habitual false carders are a constant source of revenue to observant opponents. Sometimes playing cards straight, and sometimes false carding, always puzzles opponents.

Useless false carding by declarer is stupid. It is surprising to note the number of highly rated players who habitually false card as declarer, when it can do no good.

The silver dollars consigned to Van Dyke later arrived at the Chicago federal reserve bank. Two trust agreements were drawn.

AT THE CLIFTONA

HOW much do Laurel and Hardy weigh? So much interest has been displayed in the respective poundage of the international lean and fat funny men that a Paris newspaper conducted a public guess contest on the question.

Just when the Hal Roach M-G-M feature comedy, "Our Relations," was being completed Laurel and Hardy were put on the scales and the news was cabled abroad. The figures were rather startling—167 and ¾ pounds for Laurel and 303 for Hardy. This is the heaviest the pair have ever been, in spite of their hard work in playing dual roles in the hilariously-funny picture.

The rotund Hardy in particular is getting heavier. His average has been around 250 pounds. But the extra poundage only adds to his screen attractiveness as may be noted Friday and Saturday at the Cliftona theatre when "Our Relations" opens a two days' engagement. It is a Stan Laurel production.

Gene Autry's new feature, "The Big Show" is the other half of this outstanding double feature program.

They turn out cables and arches that send towering bridges in graceful curves through space. They bend the metal into speed-devouring engines which annihilate space. They spin out shells that annihilate men. An endless circle.

Victor McLaglen, who faced steel shells during the World War, portrays a steel worker in this offering.

DAUGHTERS GET SILVER DOLLARS IN 7 1-2 TON LOT

MILWAUKEE (UP) — Seven and a half tons of silver dollars, were presented to two Milwaukee women.

George D. Van Dyke, local attorney, divided the money equally between his daughters, Mrs. Louise Van Dyke Hauxhurst, and a granddaughter, Louise Van Dyke.

Van Dyke had been owner of $270,000 in U. S. Liberty bonds. The treasury called the bonds in two summers ago and the attorney was given an alternative of accepting new bonds at a lower rate of interest or cash. The silver dollars consigned to Van Dyke later arrived at the Chicago federal reserve bank. Two trust agreements were drawn.

The gift was revealed before the state income tax board of review on whether the gifts should be taxed.

THEATRES

AT THE CLIFTONA

HOW much do Laurel and Hardy weigh? So much interest has been displayed in the respective poundage of the international lean and fat funny men that a Paris newspaper conducted a public guess-contest on the question.

Just when the Hal Roach M-G-M feature comedy, "Our Relations," was being completed Laurel and Hardy were put on the scales and the news was cabled abroad. The figures were rather startling—167 and ¼ pounds for Laurel and 303 for Hardy. This is the heaviest the pair have ever been, in spite of their hard work in playing dual roles in the hilariously-funny picture.

The rotund Hardy in particular is getting heavier. His average has been around 250 pounds. But the extra poundage only adds to his screen attractiveness as may be noted Friday and Saturday at the Cliftona theatre when "Our Relations" opens a two days' engagement. It is a Stan Laurel production.

Gene Autry's new feature, "The Big Show" is the other half of this outstanding double feature program.

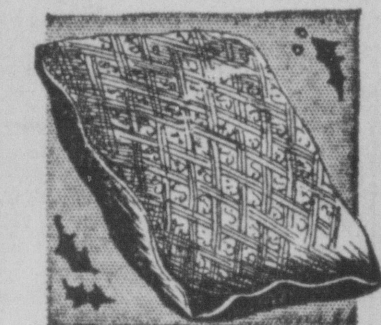

AT THE GRAND

Carl Sandburg wrote, "Men's bones are kneaded into the bread of steel." In Universal's "The Magnificent Brute," now starring Victor McLaglen at the Grand Theatre, men mould steel into the shapes that make ships which travel upon and beneath the sea. They turn out cables and arches that send towering bridges in graceful curves through space. They bend the metal into speed-devouring engines which annihilate space. They spin out shells that annihilate men. An endless circle.

Victor McLaglen, who faced steel shells during the World War, portrays a steel worker in this offering.

Gertrude Astor and Johnny Arthur.

Ted Healy, Una Merkel, Nat Pendleton, Mary Carlisle, Grant Mitchell and Harvey Stephens are included in the cast of the comedy thriller which concerns the adventures of a "chiseler" who
